The 2015 Códéga do Larinho Andreza is unoaked and comes in at 12% alcohol. I've liked this bottling a lot in the past. In this fine Branco vintage, it shows well, too, needless to say. Feeling full in the mouth, particularly for this price level, this adds a fresh, lively feel and a crisp, lingering finish with some lime nuances. Focused and tasty, this year's offering is certainly one of the best in the brand.
