The 2019 Moscatel Galego Tyto Alba is unoaked and very dry (0.6 grams of sugar and eight of total acidity). It comes in at 12.5% alcohol. This has tension and crispness to spare, landing with a bit of mouth pucker on the finish in its youth. Fragrant, with minty hints, this follows onto the palate with a touch of green eucalyptus. The fruit is lifted, and the juicy finish is mouthwatering. Tart and energetic, this is great choice for a summer refresher, if you like sharper wines, of course. The concentration is not as impressive, but this still has a good chance to hold well for several years, if you must hold it. It's worth leaning up on it today.
