The 2015 Maria Bonita Loureiro comes in at 10.6 grams per liter of residual sugar and 10.5% alcohol. This fruity Loureiro (with no noticeable fizz) has enough acidity to balance the sugar, just finishing with an off-dry edge. Very tasty, yet fresh and well supported by that core of acidity, this is not the most serious or age-worthy Loureiro, but it sure is a lot of fun. It is worth leaning up just now as it seems to be downright irresistible, but drink it young and fresh for best results. It should be great this coming summer. Needless to say, it is a very nice value.
